St James's, August 11.

This day the Right Honourable the Lord Mayor, the Aldermen, Sheriffs and Common Council of the city of London, waited upon his Majesty (being introduced by the Earl of Salisbury, Lord Chamberlain of his Majesty's Household) with the following Address, which was read by James Adair, Esq; the Recorder.

To the KING's Most Excellent Majesty, The humble Address of the Lord Mayor, Aldermen and Commons of the city of London, in Common Council assembled.

Most Gracious Sovereign,

WE, your Majesty's dutiful and loyal subjects, the Lord Mayor, Aldermen, and Commons of the city of London, in Common Council assembled, humbly approach the Throne with our most sincere congratulations on the providential deliverance manifested in the failure of that outrageous attempt which so lately endangered your Majesty's Royal person.

Impelled at once by duty and inclination, your Majesty's faithful Citizens of London are happy in tendering an unfeigned assurance of their affection and zeal for your Majesty's person and Government.

Deeply sensible of the value and importance of your Majesty's life to the prosperity of your kingdoms, and of the unspeakable affliction which your people would have sustained by its mournful termination, the late horrid occurrence (which threatened that national calamity) could not fail to excite in their minds a proportionate alarm; but more particularly painful and severe were their sensations, on reflecting that your Majesty's gracious attention to the petitions of your subjects had proved the lamentable cause of exposing your sacred person to danger.

Permit us, Royal Sire, to add our most fervent prayers, that your reign may continue long and prosperous over free, happy, and united subjects; and that your descendants may transmit the blessings the nation now enjoys to the latest posterity.

Signed by order of the Court, William Rix.

To which Address his Majesty was pleased to return the following most Gracious Answer:

I receive with the greatest pleasure, the very affectionate expressions of your duty and attachment to me, and thank you for your congratulations upon the providential deliverance from the attack which has been lately made upon my person. I am sensible that your professions cannot but be acceptable to me from my loyal city of London, to whom I am always disposed to show every mark of attention and regard.

They were all received very graciously, and had the honour to kiss his Majesty's hand.

After which, his Majesty was pleased to confer the honour of Knighthood on Benjamin Hammet, Esq; one of the Aldermen of the city of London.

[The Gazette likewise contains Addresses from the Town of Southampton, City of York, City of New Sarum, Town and Borough of Southwark, Borough of New Windsor, Borough of Hartford, Borough of Evesham, on his Majesty's late providential escape from assassination.]

FROM THE LONDON PAPERS, Aug. 13.

Algiers, June 19. The Comte d'Expilly has at last succeeded in his negotiation for a treaty of peace between this Regency and Spain, which was signed yesterday, and this Mr d'Expilly failed on board a Spanish brigantine for Alicante to be himself the carrier of the above treaty. He has succeeded in the principal object of his mission with an uncommon degree of celerity, but not been able to agree about the ransom to be paid for the Spanish slaves, which the Dey has fixed at a most exorbitant price, namely 12000 piastres for each slave employed in the apartments of the fortresses of Oran, 1300 for each sailor, 3500 for the captains of vessels, and 4000 for every woman, besides the expenses, which amount to no trifle: when Mr d'Expilly took leave of the Dey, he asked if there was no abatement to be made in the above exorbitant ransom, but the Dey only told him, that "The King, his master, must first fulfil the engagements which had induced him to listen to peace, and then he would see what was further to be done, relative to the ransom of the slaves." Madam d'Expilly, who accompanied her husband, had the honour to take leave of the Dey, and was not only very graciously received by him, but was permitted to take with her six beautiful horses, which that lady means to present to the Princess of Asturias. The Comtesse also took leave of the ladies of the principal members of Government, and made them rich presents.

The two American negotiators have not had the same success; the Dey said he could not listen to any amicable alliance with the American Congress till he had settled that matter with the Porte, but he told them they might ransom their countrymen for 28,000 piastres; but this sum was so large that one of the negotiators is gone back for fresh instructions in this affair.

Rome, July 10. The ports of Civita Vecchia, Ancona and Senigaglia have recovered their ancient privileges which they were deprived of by the ordinance relative to the duties upon foreign merchandizes, which was equal to a prohibition. We are not certain that this alteration in favour of those ports will be of longer continuance than during the fair held at Senigaglia, which fair does not, however, promise to be very brilliant.

Genoa, July 19. One of our merchant ships having fallen in with three Algerine galleons, and a xebec on the coast of Spain, these pirates wanted to visit her, which was refused, our Republic being at peace with Algiers; the Barbarians, however, inflicting on making search, our ship run into a small deserted Spanish port in Galicia, not far from Bayonne. The Algerines then sent a number of men in the xebec's boat, who entered the harbour, calling out to our people to surrender; but instead of complying they fired two pieces of canon, and sunk the boat with its crew. The Captain of the ship immediately sent to the Venetian Consul at Bayonne to request assistance, as the Algerines continued hovering off the port, trusting in their superiority of force; our vessel mounting only four guns, with a crew of no more than twelve men. It is hoped this affair will not be attended with any bad consequences, though the Algerines have for some time acted treacherously to the Republic, particularly in sending some gun-boats to the assistance of the Bey of Tunis.

Extract of the Resolutions of their Noble Mightinesses, the States of Holland and West Friesland, passed the 27th of July, 1786.

Having returned the deliberation of the report of the 5th of November last, referred to the Assembly by the Equestrian order, and other Commissioners of their High Mightinesses, relative to the great and urgent point of obedience to the Commissarial resolution of their Noble and Great Mightinesses on the 20th of September last, as far as relates to the command of the garrison of the Hague, and the resolution of their Noble and Great Mightinesses, on the 11th of March 1772; as also the letter of his Highness, written from the Castle of Loo, dated the 4th of December 1784, a copy of which was sent on the 7th to the Members of the Assembly, along with the memorial of the deliberations, and other pieces thereto annexed, and counted from the letter A, to the letter M, on the said report, relative to the command of the garrison of the Hague, it was thought proper and understood, on the principles contained in the said report, to charge the said Deputy-Councillors by these presents, to conform exactly for the future, relative to the command of the garrison of the Hague, to the contents of the resolution of their Noble and Great Mightinesses, on the 4th and 5th of March 1672, to every point there regulated.

It was then resolved, "That a copy of this resolution should be sent to the Deputy-Councillors, to enable them to conform to it exactly; a like extract was to be sent to his Highness, included in a letter for his own information."

The following is a copy of the resolution of the 4th and 5th of March 1672, alluded to in the above resolution.

On the proposal of some Members of this Assembly, after mature deliberation, by an unanimous resolution of the Equestrian order of the Nobles of the Cities, for mutual tranquillity, it was resolved and decreed, as it is resolved and decreed by these presents, that the Company of the Body Guards of their Noble and Great Mightinesses, and the four ordinary companies of cavalry, making here all the garrisons; as also all other troops, which may be brought to the place of residence of their Noble and Great Mightinesses in extraordinary emergencies, shall not be subject to the orders of any person, but those of their Noble and Great Mightinesses, and shall pay obedience to their Deputy-Councillors; that during their stay in the said residence, they shall not directly or indirectly pay obedience in any manner whatsoever, to any person but their Noble and Great Mightinesses, and shall owe obedience to the said Deputy-Councillors; by this, the right of giving the word of command, and all other marks of authority over the said army, shall be vested exclusively in the said Deputy-Councillors, and that these marks of respect must not be paid to any person, whoever he may be, whether as to the civil or military character, dignity, or function; and that it shall not be permitted to any person of any power or authority, whoever they may be, other than the Deputy-Councillors. This is an article which shall be inserted in the instructions given to the said Deputy-Councillors.

Kingston, June 22. We hear from Clarendon, that on Tuesday the 6th, the Rio Mino, which rifies in the mountains of that parish, by the heavy rains that prevailed for several days before, suddenly overflowed its banks, and with irresistible violence swept away every building on Windford estate, the property of Mr Dawkins, so that not the least vestige of an habitation remains, together with a considerable quantity of produce, and a great deal of live stock. The river now runs through the midst of the estate, and the damage occasioned by the inundation is computed at an enormous sum. Another estate in that neighbourhood, it seems, lost thirty hogheads of sugar by the same flood.

Kingston, June 14. Last night, about ten o'clock, a negro woman, the property of Mr George Geddes, went to the guard-house, disguised in a manner almost too shocking to relate, her nose being entirely cut from her face, her ears dug from her head so that her skull remained bare, and other parts of her body very much bruised. On being asked who was the perpetrator of such unheard of cruelty, she replied, her master; that he beat her much that evening, and afterwards treated her in the manner related. Lieutenant Mikkely, the officer on guard, immediately headed a party of men, and went to the house, the door of which being opened, they entered and secured Geddes, who had several marks of blood on his clothes, but said, he knew nothing of the matter: The ears were found in the house, and several pieces of a stick, which it seems he had been beaten with. Geddes was secured.

On the 17th, Geddes was examined before the sitting magistrates at the court house, on Wednesday morning, when he confessed the horrid deed, with all its barbarous circumstances. It appeared, on his examination, that his wife had been frequently jealous of the negro woman, and in particular that evening, had used very opprobrious language concerning her, which irritated Geddes to such a pitch, that seizing the poor unhappy creature, he bound her hands behind her, and with a savage ferocity threw her down, and kneeled on her neck, while he treated her in the manner already described. Previous to this, he had cut off a piece from the ear of another wench, his property.

Nassau, June 17. The brigantine Friends Adventure, Captain Appleton, of Liverpool, mentioned to have been lost on Sandy Key, failed from New-York to Jamaica on the 18th of last January with a cargo of lumber. In 17 days after, made the Island of Jamaica, was driven to leeward by a strong current, and spent three weeks in endeavouring to beat up, without effect. On the 1st of March made Cuba, a little to leeward of the Isle of Pines. Being greatly distressed for water, on the 8th landed at the Cape Corante in quest of some, but found none. A few days after discovered the watering wells at Cape Antonio, where they filled their casks. On the 12th, took their departure from Cape Antonio, intending to go through the Gulph till they could clear the Bahamas, and then make for the windward passage. On the 15th, at half past three, A. M. steering north, wind blowing fresh from the south, ran on a sunken reef about two miles from a key, which they have since learned is called Sandy-key, two leagues N. W. from the Grand Bahama, cut away the masts, and with great difficulty got ashore in the boats, with a few articles of provisions, on Sandy-key. Day discovered to them that they were cast away on a desert sandy-bank, where not a shrub grew, nor was there the appearance of fresh water. A large island, Bahama, two leagues to the N. W. appeared well timbered, but afforded no signs of inhabitants. Two boats they had, but they were insufficient to carry the whole crew off. To add to their distress, no person on board could ascertain where they were. With spars and sails they made three tents; in digging a well they fortunately met with fresh water sufficient to supply them all; they next determined on building a vessel adequate to the purpose of transporting themselves to some inhabited place. The island in sight promised them timber, the wreck, iron work, and her cargo, planks. A passenger on board, being a shipwright encouraged them to this enterprise, which was immediately entered upon. While engaged in this arduous undertaking, two of the sailors on the 5th of April went off with the best boat; and, as they have since learned, after being 18 days at sea, reached a settlement on Abaco, where, making a report to Captain Stephens of the situation in which they had left their companions, he sent a small vessel with necessaries to their relief, which after three weeks fruitless search returned back. On the 12th of April, early in the morning, saw a large ship aground on a reef about three leagues to the N. W. and a brig standing off and on, wind blowing fresh at fourth. The wind having moderated, and the sea fallen, in the evening five men went from Sandy-key, in a Moses boat, for the ship, which they reached, found her deserted, and her hold full of water. They were agreeably surprised to find on board a seasonable supply of live stock, bread and other provisions. In the Captain's state room, a board ripped from a bulk head near the mizen-mast attracted their attention; and on further search, they found it to be a concealment, where 2200 dollars remained. These they secured, and afterwards divided equally among the whole crew. Some articles of wearing apparel were also found; and, in order to divide the value equitably, were put up to public sale in their camp, and the proceeds shared: The ship was a Spaniard, homeward bound, and went to pieces on the 25th. The 2d of May the Friends Adventure was beat to pieces by a heavy gale from W. N. W. Continuing to work at their new vessel, on the 5th of May they defied a small sail in the offing; sent off their boat, and found her to be a wrecker from this port, commanded by Philip Thomson. The day after another wrecker appeared. Three of the sailors accompanied Thomson hither; the rest determined on accomplishing the work they had engaged in, building the vessel, which was now nearly finished, and carrying their property in her, rather than comply with the terms proposed by the wreckers. On the 27th and 28th, 16 small craft arrived at Sandy-key. Their crews assisted in launching the vessel, in which Captain Appleton and his crew arrived here on Wednesday the 7th of this month.

L O N D O N, Aug. 12.

Yesterday some dispatches were brought to the Marquis of Carmarthen's office from Lord Torrington, his Majesty's ambassador at Brussels, which were laid before his Majesty.

Yesterday afternoon the duke of Saxe-Gotha set off for Harwich, in one of the King's coaches, to embark for Germany.

This morning arrived express at the General post office, a mail from Jamaica, which was brought over in his Majesty's packet, the Sandwich, Capt Dillon, after a passage of seven weeks.

The engaging conduct of the heir apparent was a matter of real political importance to this country. The easy, generous, and elegant hospitality in which he lived, and the taste and magnificence that distinguished his equipage, furniture, and all things about him, attracted and invited many illustrious foreigners, and it was every day growing more and more into fashion on the Continent for the gay and great to make a trip to England, chiefly for the purpose of being introduced to the Prince of Wales; who was a mirror, that reflected in a very noble and pleasing manner the genius of his country.

Upon a recent enquiry into the revenue and expenditure of his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, by the Commissioners appointed by him for that purpose, it was discovered, to his immortal honour, that near fourteen thousand pounds have been paid annually out of his income to distressed objects, for the encouragement of arts and literature, and as pensions to reduced officers. If such offices of philanthropy are not sufficient to awaken the sensibility of the country, and to procure a provision for him in future, more adequate to his benevolence, we cannot hope in future to see a British Prince the patron of merit, or the promoter of humanity.

The pride and insolence which pervaded the whole English nation, after the successful war that terminated in 1763, engendered an aversion and hatred to this country, which produced more important effects perhaps than are generally imagined. There was not a State in Europe which did not rejoice at the difficulties we encountered, and the losses which we sustained, in the struggle with America. The rudeness of English travellers abroad, and their haughty reserve to foreigners at home, rendered the nation at large almost universally odious. The manners of the Prince of Wales have perhaps done more towards effacing these unfavourable impressions concerning our countrymen, than all our negotiations for peace, commerce, and friendly intercourse, united: His liberality was admired by all nations, and drew their affections to this country. It gave fashion and encouragement to the English manufactures; which circumstance alone, in a commercial view, was of great consequence, and more than overbalanced the annual sum that would have supported the elegance and munificence of his manner of living.

At the time that the unfortunate mad woman, Mrs Nicholson, attempted the life of our most gracious Sovereign; the Prince of Wales was at Brighton. His Majesty's servants not having condescended to apprise his Royal Highness of an event that so nearly concerned him, which it was unquestionably their duty to do, (the Prince himself having had no communication with the rest of the royal family, since the retrenchment of his expenses) the first intelligence he received of the circumstance was from a public news-paper. The Prince, with all that filial affection, which has distinguished every action of his life, and which gives so noble a lustre to his other virtues, hastened to Windsor. All past misunderstandings were forgotten on his part; and he flew on the wings of respect and duty to lay himself at his father's feet, and felicitate his fortunate escape. He arrived about six in the evening, and was received by the Queen, his Majesty being at that time walking in the garden. Some refreshment was ordered for him, of which he partook, while he was waiting his royal father's permission to appear in his presence. When he had remained a considerable time in a state of extreme anxiety and suspense, he enquired of the Queen, "Whether his Majesty knew that he was under his roof?" and "the reason that had brought him to Windsor?" He was answered, "That the King had been informed of it as soon as he arrived, but as yet had given no order for admitting him to his presence." After assuring himself that his Majesty was perfectly safe, and taking leave of the Princesses, whom he was permitted to see, the Prince retired to his apartment, where he slept that night, and the next day returned to Brighton.

A very particular order was sent from the Secretary of State with Mrs Nicholson, to the Master and Matron of Bethlehem Hospital, that no person be permitted to visit her, without leave first obtained from government.

Yesterday, Lord Tankerville resigned his office of Joint Post-Master General to the King, at St James's.

Mr Palmer's plan and appointment we conjecture to be the cause of the above resignation; when a little man gets the better of a great one, it is time to give up!

Before the settling day in August, Mr Cole will have purchased 205,000 l. in different stocks, and left as much money in the market as will buy 105,000 l. more. This is an astonishing support to the stocks, which must not only prevent a fall, but tend to elevate the price of every stock at market.

It is strongly asserted, that additional troops are to be sent out for the defence of the West-India Islands, and to secure them against the menaced reprisals of America, and that there will be a Commander in Chief employed.

The intention of his Majesty's Ministers to assemble the Parliament so early as November is highly proper, and deserves the public thanks. It will be the means of bringing the session to its proper period of sitting, the winter—when gentlemen cannot have an excuse for absenting themselves from the discharge of their duty from the warmness of the weather.

Mr Dundas questioned her about the place of her nativity. She said it bordered upon Scotland, where rebellion was no crime; regicide a virtue; and treachery an hereditary principle of the people. Mr Dundas declared her quite mad.

Court, the opinion of the Doctor, and the opinion of the Ministers, having pronounced her mad, she was accordingly ordered to Bedlam.

WIND AT DEAL, Aug. 11. S.
EDINBURGH.
Extract of a letter from London, Aug. 12.
“If ever the world was, according to the old ballad, turned upside down, it surely is at this present time. The moment seems with wonders.— There is scarcely a day passes without some event or other, too mysterious for the deepest politician to unravel, or too abstruse, perhaps, even for after-ages to make out.
“This being the Anniversary of the birth of his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, and his Royal Highness having no house of his own, the same is to be observed at the Castle of Windsor, where there is to be a grand supper and ball. But what is very extraordinary, neither their Majesties, nor Prince of Wales, nor the Princesses, are to be present on the occasion. Their Majesties and the Princesses are gone on an excursion to Oxford, and the Prince of Wales is at Brompton, where his birth day, will, no doubt, be kept with every possible mark of respect, as it will be in London, Westminster, and their environs, in which places most costly and singular preparations are making for very extraordinary displays of illuminations of various kinds, as well as capital exhibitions of fireworks.
“For some days past sundry persons have put an end to their existence, owing, it is supposed, to their being in a state of insanity. At the last sessions held for this city, a woman was tried for murdering her sister, and a young man for forgery, both thought to be insane. In the course of the present week, no less than seven acts of suicide have been committed in this city, and five others within a few miles distance thereof, and a few days ago a man of genteel appearance actually surrendered himself to a magistrate, Alderman Hopkins, and begged he might be committed to some prison, for fear he should do some crime or other. In such a general state of madness, it would not be very surprising, surely, if in the London Gazette of this evening, a proclamation should be issued, for all persons, either insane, or suspected of being non compos mentis, to surrender themselves within so many days, as they are no longer fit to be trusted abroad.
“It were to be wished, that these extraordinary events were unaccompanied with another fact, that cannot be less affecting to the R— F—, than surprising to the subject, and which is neither more nor less, than that his H— P. W. H. has actually stabbed his cook, though there is great reason to hope, that the man will recover. It is said to have been done in a moment of passion upon the cook's being drunk, and using some ill language. This may be depended upon, however it may be smothered over, and the public are rather anxious to learn, whether the P— will be pronounced insane or not.
“It is confidently said, that a society of gentlemen is forming for the purpose of a spirited investigation into the case of Margaret Nicholson, and that they intend preferring a bill of indictment against her, which may be done, his Majesty's Council having no right to deem her insane, in order to her being brought to trial, when her insanity, if she really is insane, should be proved.
“Lord Tankerville has resigned his place as one of the Post Masters General on account of Mr Palmer's appointment, in consequence of his plan of conveying the mails by coaches. His Lordship has all along set his face against it, and surely such a humbug upon the public was never so rewarded.— Mr Palmer's plan is absurd upon the very first blush of it; for surely the latest hour possible ought to be given for receiving letters in London. Before Mr Palmer's plan took place, the Post-office was open till twelve o'clock at night, whereas it is now shut up at seven o'clock in the evening.” On Monday last, Principal Robertson received a third donation of fifty pounds to the Royal Infirmary, from the same humane and unknown benefactor, who wishes the sums which he has given now and formerly, to be applied for the relief of indigent lunatics. As Principal Robertson is desirous of communicating to this charitable person, some particulars concerning the mode of employing his donation, he requests of him to point out some way of conveying this information, that may be most consistent with his wish of remaining unknown.
This day, the Lord Provost, Magistrates and Council, unanimously resolved to address his Majesty on the providential deliverance he met with from the late attempt upon his Royal person. An extraordinary Council is accordingly summoned for Friday next, in order to prepare and sign their address of congratulation.
On Sunday last, Sir Thomas Moncreiffe of Mon-creiffe, Bart. was married at Dalhousie Castle, to the Right Hon. Lady Elizabeth Ramfay, eldest daughter of the Right Hon. the Earl of Dalhousie.
On Monday last died at Alloa, the Rev. Mr William Moncreiffe, minister of the gospel there.

On Sunday last, at his father's house in Fiftherrow, in the 44th year of his age, Gilbert Stuart, L.L.D. a gentleman well known in the literary world, and highly distinguished by the learning, ingenious, and elegance of his historical and political compositions.
Yesterday afternoon, by the sudden rise of the waters, occasioned from the late heavy rains, two boys and a girl were unfortunately drowned in the neighbourhood of Dalkeith and Musselburgh.
Jean Maclean and Elizabeth Collie were last night committed to the tolbooth, by warrant of the Sheriff, on suspicion of stealing sundry articles from a blacksmith at Bonnytown, in the neighbourhood of this city.
We hear from Airth, that on Friday last the body of a man was observed by a woman floating in the water opposite to Pitfoules. The woman went into the water, and brought the corpse on shore, which was afterwards decently interred. It appeared, that the corpse had been long in the water, and had floated up the river from Leith roads, or thereabouts, with the tide. The person had on a pair of canvas trousers, a check shirt, with a flannel one above it.
The shock of an earthquake, which appears to have been so very general, was likewise felt in Leith by several people; but we have not heard of any person in this city who was affected by it.
On Friday morning last, about 20 minutes after two, we had two smart shocks of an earthquake.
Altho' at a time of night when most people are asleep, it was felt by great numbers; many it awaked, who were terrified by the shaking of their beds; which made the joints and partitions of their houses to creak as if falling. Those who were awake lay, the distance betwixt the shocks would be 3 or 4 seconds. One man, who had been about a mile down the river fishing, happened to be sitting on the ground with his face to the west; the account he gives is, that the ground seemed to lift itself first against his right thigh, and immediately against his left; something like a wave; and in two or three seconds after, the same was repeated, but with greater violence; from this he judged the shocks run from north to south. Dumfries Journal.
We learn from another man, who happened to get up early to go out of town, that while he was sitting in his room, with his back to the wall, he was affected as if some person had taken him up by the shoulders and shaken him;—he gives the time account as to the distance betwixt the two shocks. He tells us, that a bird he had in a cage was thrown from the stick on which it was sitting, and that it fluttered about the cage in great fright. The same thing we hear, happened to many other birds; and that some killed themselves by the violence with which they had thrown the fright, darted themselves against their cages, and others lost a great many feathers.
The man who had got up to go out of town, informs us moreover, that since the shocks his kitchen door cannot be shut, but with a good deal of force, which before was quite easy. Ibid.
The plates on many dressers were made to clatter oringle; and in one house an earthen plate was thrown from a dresser down to the ground and broken; and the plates were heard to rattle on the house by some people on the street, who had been leading peats. The same shocks we hear have been felt many miles round, but we have not learned further particulars. And though many have been frightened, yet providentially nobody, so far as we hear, have been hurt. We are since informed that this shock has been felt at Carlisle, Penrith, Kendal, Whitehaven, and Newcastle, about the same time.
Ibid.
On Saturday last, a boy of about six years of age, son to John Dickson blacksmith in Dumfries, diverting himself in a fund pit, with some of his companions, was buried in the bottom of the pit, above four feet below the land, by the falling in of the brow, where he continued above a quarter of an hour before he was dug out; and when got out, he was in all appearance dead, and continued so for other fifteen minutes, when signs of life began to appear.
We are happy to hear, he has continued to recover ever since, and now appears to be out of danger.
On Wednesday evening, at Aberdeen, a young boy fell from a considerable height on a stone, by which means he fractured his skull in a violent manner. He was immediately carried to the hospital, where the operation of the trepan was performed by Dr Livingston, from which he seemed to obtain immediate relief, and continues in a favourable way.
The following paragraphs appeared in the Aberdeen Journal of Monday last: As similar practices are no doubt carried on in this city, it may not be unworthy the attention of our Magistrates to endeavour to discover those guilty of them.
“Some time ago, the magistrates having received information, that the greatest part of the provisions coming into the markets of this city were forestalled by a number of different persons, who seemed to live by this practice, they caused the most minute enquiry to be made into the matter; and, in consequence of this measure, a very great number of the foretallers were discovered, convicted, and fined for the offence, during the last two weeks.
There are more under prosecution at present; and we are assured the Magistrates are determined to persevere in this plan in all time coming, and to hold a court every week, for the special purpose of trying foretallers; and to cause their officers patrolle, not only in the market place, but through all the streets in the city, and the different roads leading thereto, for the discovery of those persons. The good effects of this measure are already obvious, by the abundance of provisions in the market.
“As many country people may, through ignorance, incur the penalties of foretalling, it is proper to mention to them, that, by law, “any person who shall buy or sell any provisions coming to a “market, before they are brought to, and exposed “in the public market place,” is a foretaller, and liable in 40 l. Scots for the first offence, besides confiscation of the goods bought or sold. We are informed, that it has been a common practice here to buy up provisions coming to market, particularly butter and cheese, poultry, and eggs, &c. in the stallers' houses, in each of which are a sort of market; but this practice, as well as selling on the streets, in the way to the market place, is plainly illegal; and after this caution we hope will be given up, as those who persist in it may be assured, if they are detected, they will be most severely punished, and their whole provisions, will be confiscated and given to the poor's hospital.

“Last week, the Magistrate caused weigh the whole butter brought into the market, and are to continue to do so weekly. It is with pleasure we add, that there was not a single pound found deficient.”
The circumstance of a harpoon which had been struck into a whale in the Southern fish ry, being found in it, when taken by the Deben Bay, in Davis's strait, is doubtless very extraordinary.—A circumstance as singular happened a few days ago, the truth of which is well known to many people in Whitehaven:—Mr. Edward Kegan, many years master of a vessel called the Martin, belonging to the port of Whitehaven, lost his watch off the banks of Newfoundland. About three years afterwards, a fish that was taken off Corke, by another vessel belonging to the same port, had a watch in its belly; on examining it, the maker's name was easily discovered, viz. “Edward Steele, Whitehaven;” it was immediately brought there, and Mr Steele, on turning to the number, immediately ascertained it to be Mr Kegan's watch, which after being buried under water for so long a time, had emerged at that great distance. The watch was restored to the owner, but the works (as might be supposed) were so much rusted as to prevent its being of further use.
Extract of a letter from Kells, Aug. 11.
“There was a shock of an earthquake felt here this morning about two o'clock. Its motion appeared to be from west to east. Mr W—'s wife and daughter at Corham were so much alarmed with the motion, succeeded by a noise as if the slates had been rumbling from the roof of the house, that they jumped out of bed. I remember of being waked by what appeared to me to be a jolt, and which, at the time, I attributed to a nervous affection which one sometimes feels in their sleep.” Extract of a letter from Eyemouth, Aug. 13.
“During the course of last week, but particularly on Friday and yesterday, the herring fishing has been uncommonly successful. From fifty to sixty boats, at present employed in this trade, had, on these two days, upon an average, from ten to fifty thousand, which sold from 16 d. to 18 d. a hundred. Should the weather continue favourable for a few weeks, we expect a greater fishing this season than has happened in the memory of any person living here.”

there are more boats employed than for several years past. One boat this morning had 20,000 herrings, which sold at 1 s. 6 d. per hundred.”

TO BE SOLD by public roup, upon Friday the 25th August 1786, within the house of David Gardner vintner in Strathmiglo, betwixt the hours of four and six afternoon.

That DWELLING-HOUSE, Offices, and Garden thereto belonging, lying at the east end of the populous and thriving village of Strathmiglo, in the shire of Fife, which have been but newly built by Robert Cooper architect and surveyor, upon an elegant and commodious plan. The house consists of a kitchen, milk-house, larder, parlour, two large bed-rooms, and two servants rooms off the kitchen, on the first flat, with a cellar and gardener's room adjoining; a dining and drawing-room, and a bed-room off each of them, on the second flat; and two large bed-rooms, and servants room on the attic storey, besides closets, and various other conveniences, all fitted up in the most complete and handsome manner. The garden is completely inclosed with a stone and lime wall. In short, a more beautiful piece of policy, of its size, is scarce any where to be met with, so that any enconiums upon it here would be altogether superfluous.

The premises are held of a subject-superior for payment of a small fee-duty; and the title-deeds, which are clear, and articles of sale, will be seen in the hands of David Lister, at Mr Bruce's, clerk to the signet, Queen Street, Edinburgh, with whom persons intending to purchase may commune, and the subjects will be shown by the said David Gardner.
